In our busy schedule of nursing we find time to be people, too. We bike ride, play tennis, display our green thumbs, belong to families and are individuals. Our diverse activities are numbered by the distinct personalities we are. Individuals we may be, but we have one common goal—nursing.

Student nurses focus on themselves after hours. Some feed an empty stomach, go to the park, get ready to go out, or just relax on the nearest chair.

A busy day on the wards finds charting, postioning, and observing for signs and symptoms.

Yet, the student nurse inevitably finds time for a kind word.

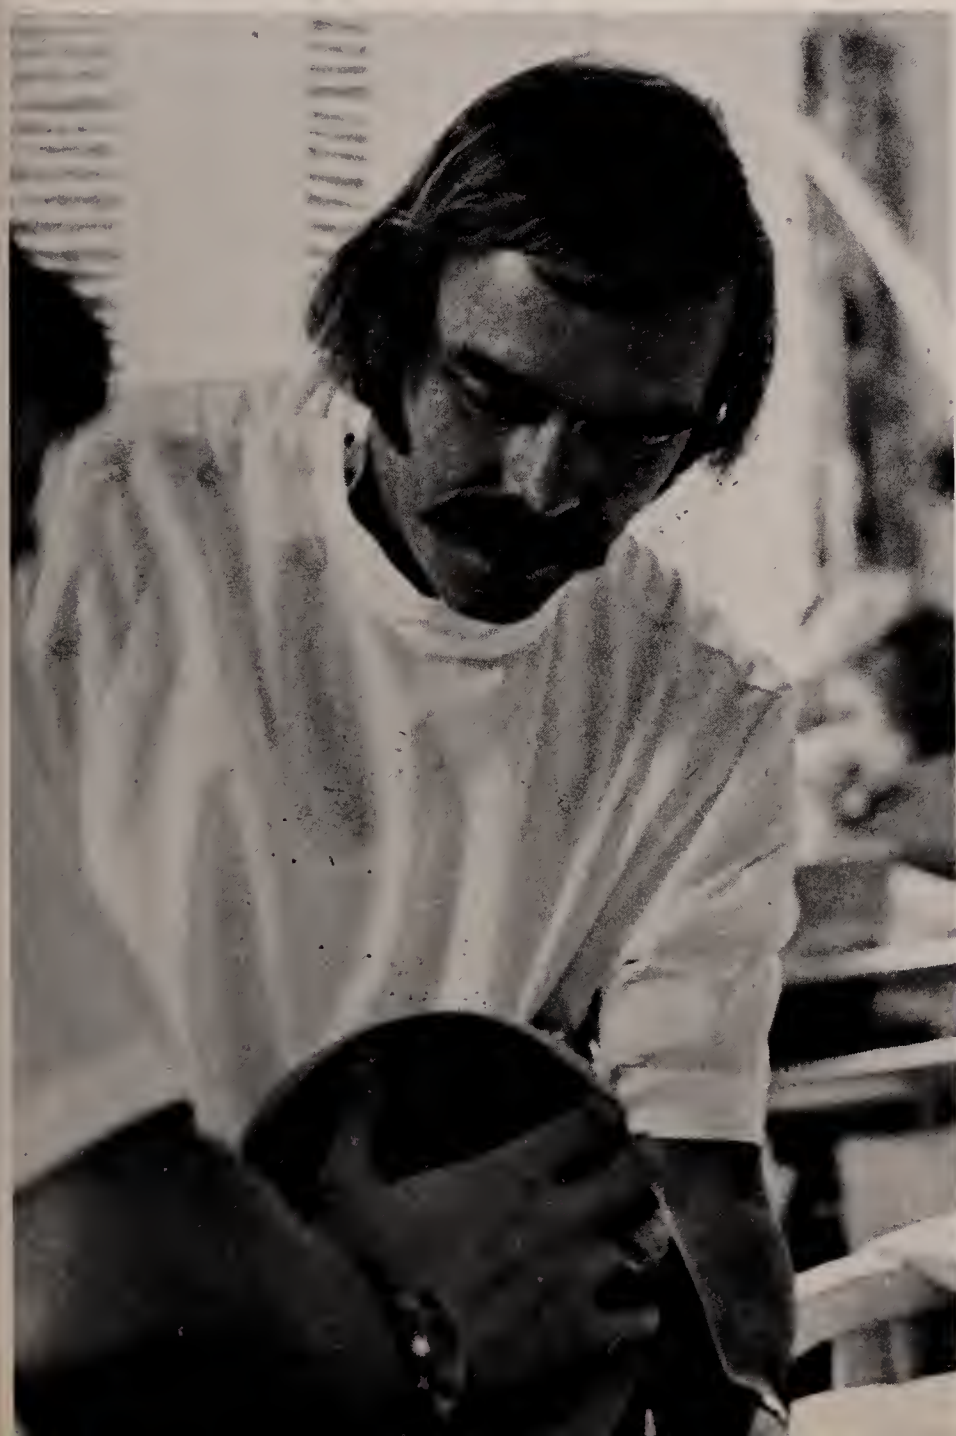

Yes, nursing is technical.

But, its worth its weight in the occasional laughter of learning and finally a smile of satisfaction.

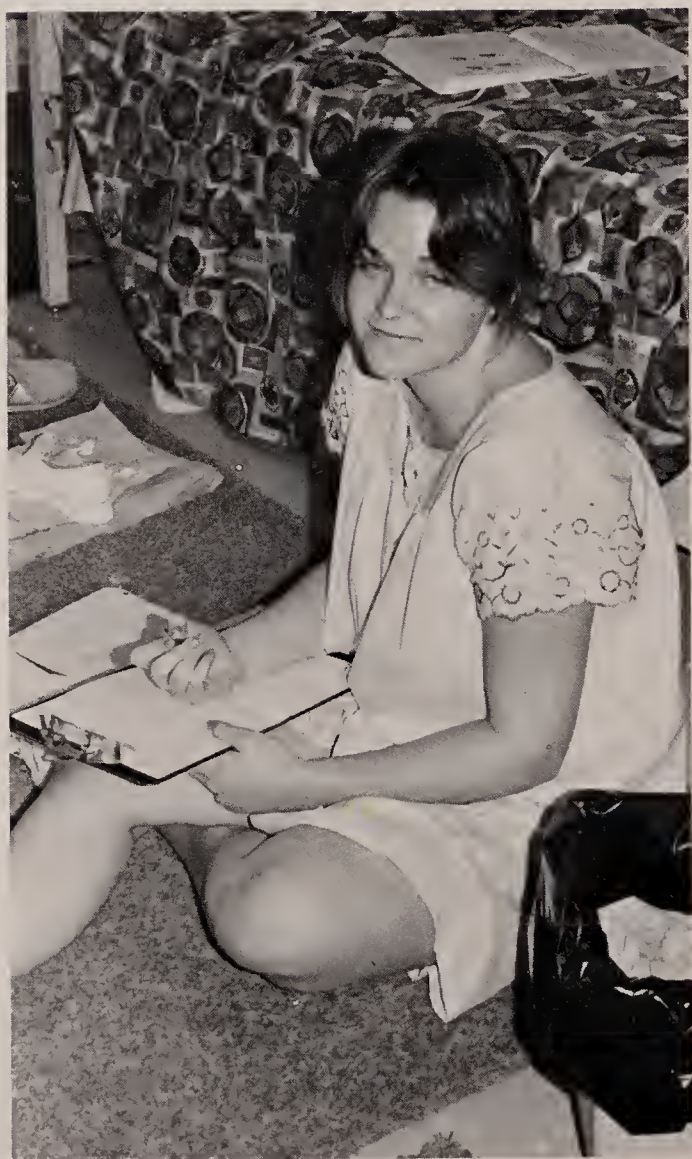

Believe it or not all of these people, whether they have green thumbs, talk for hours on the phone, build pyramids at the lakefront or wear masks on Halloween, care about people and will all someday be nurses.

If only there were simple steps and rules to follow to make sure we did everything we wanted to, nursing would be so much easier. But who ever said nursing was easy!

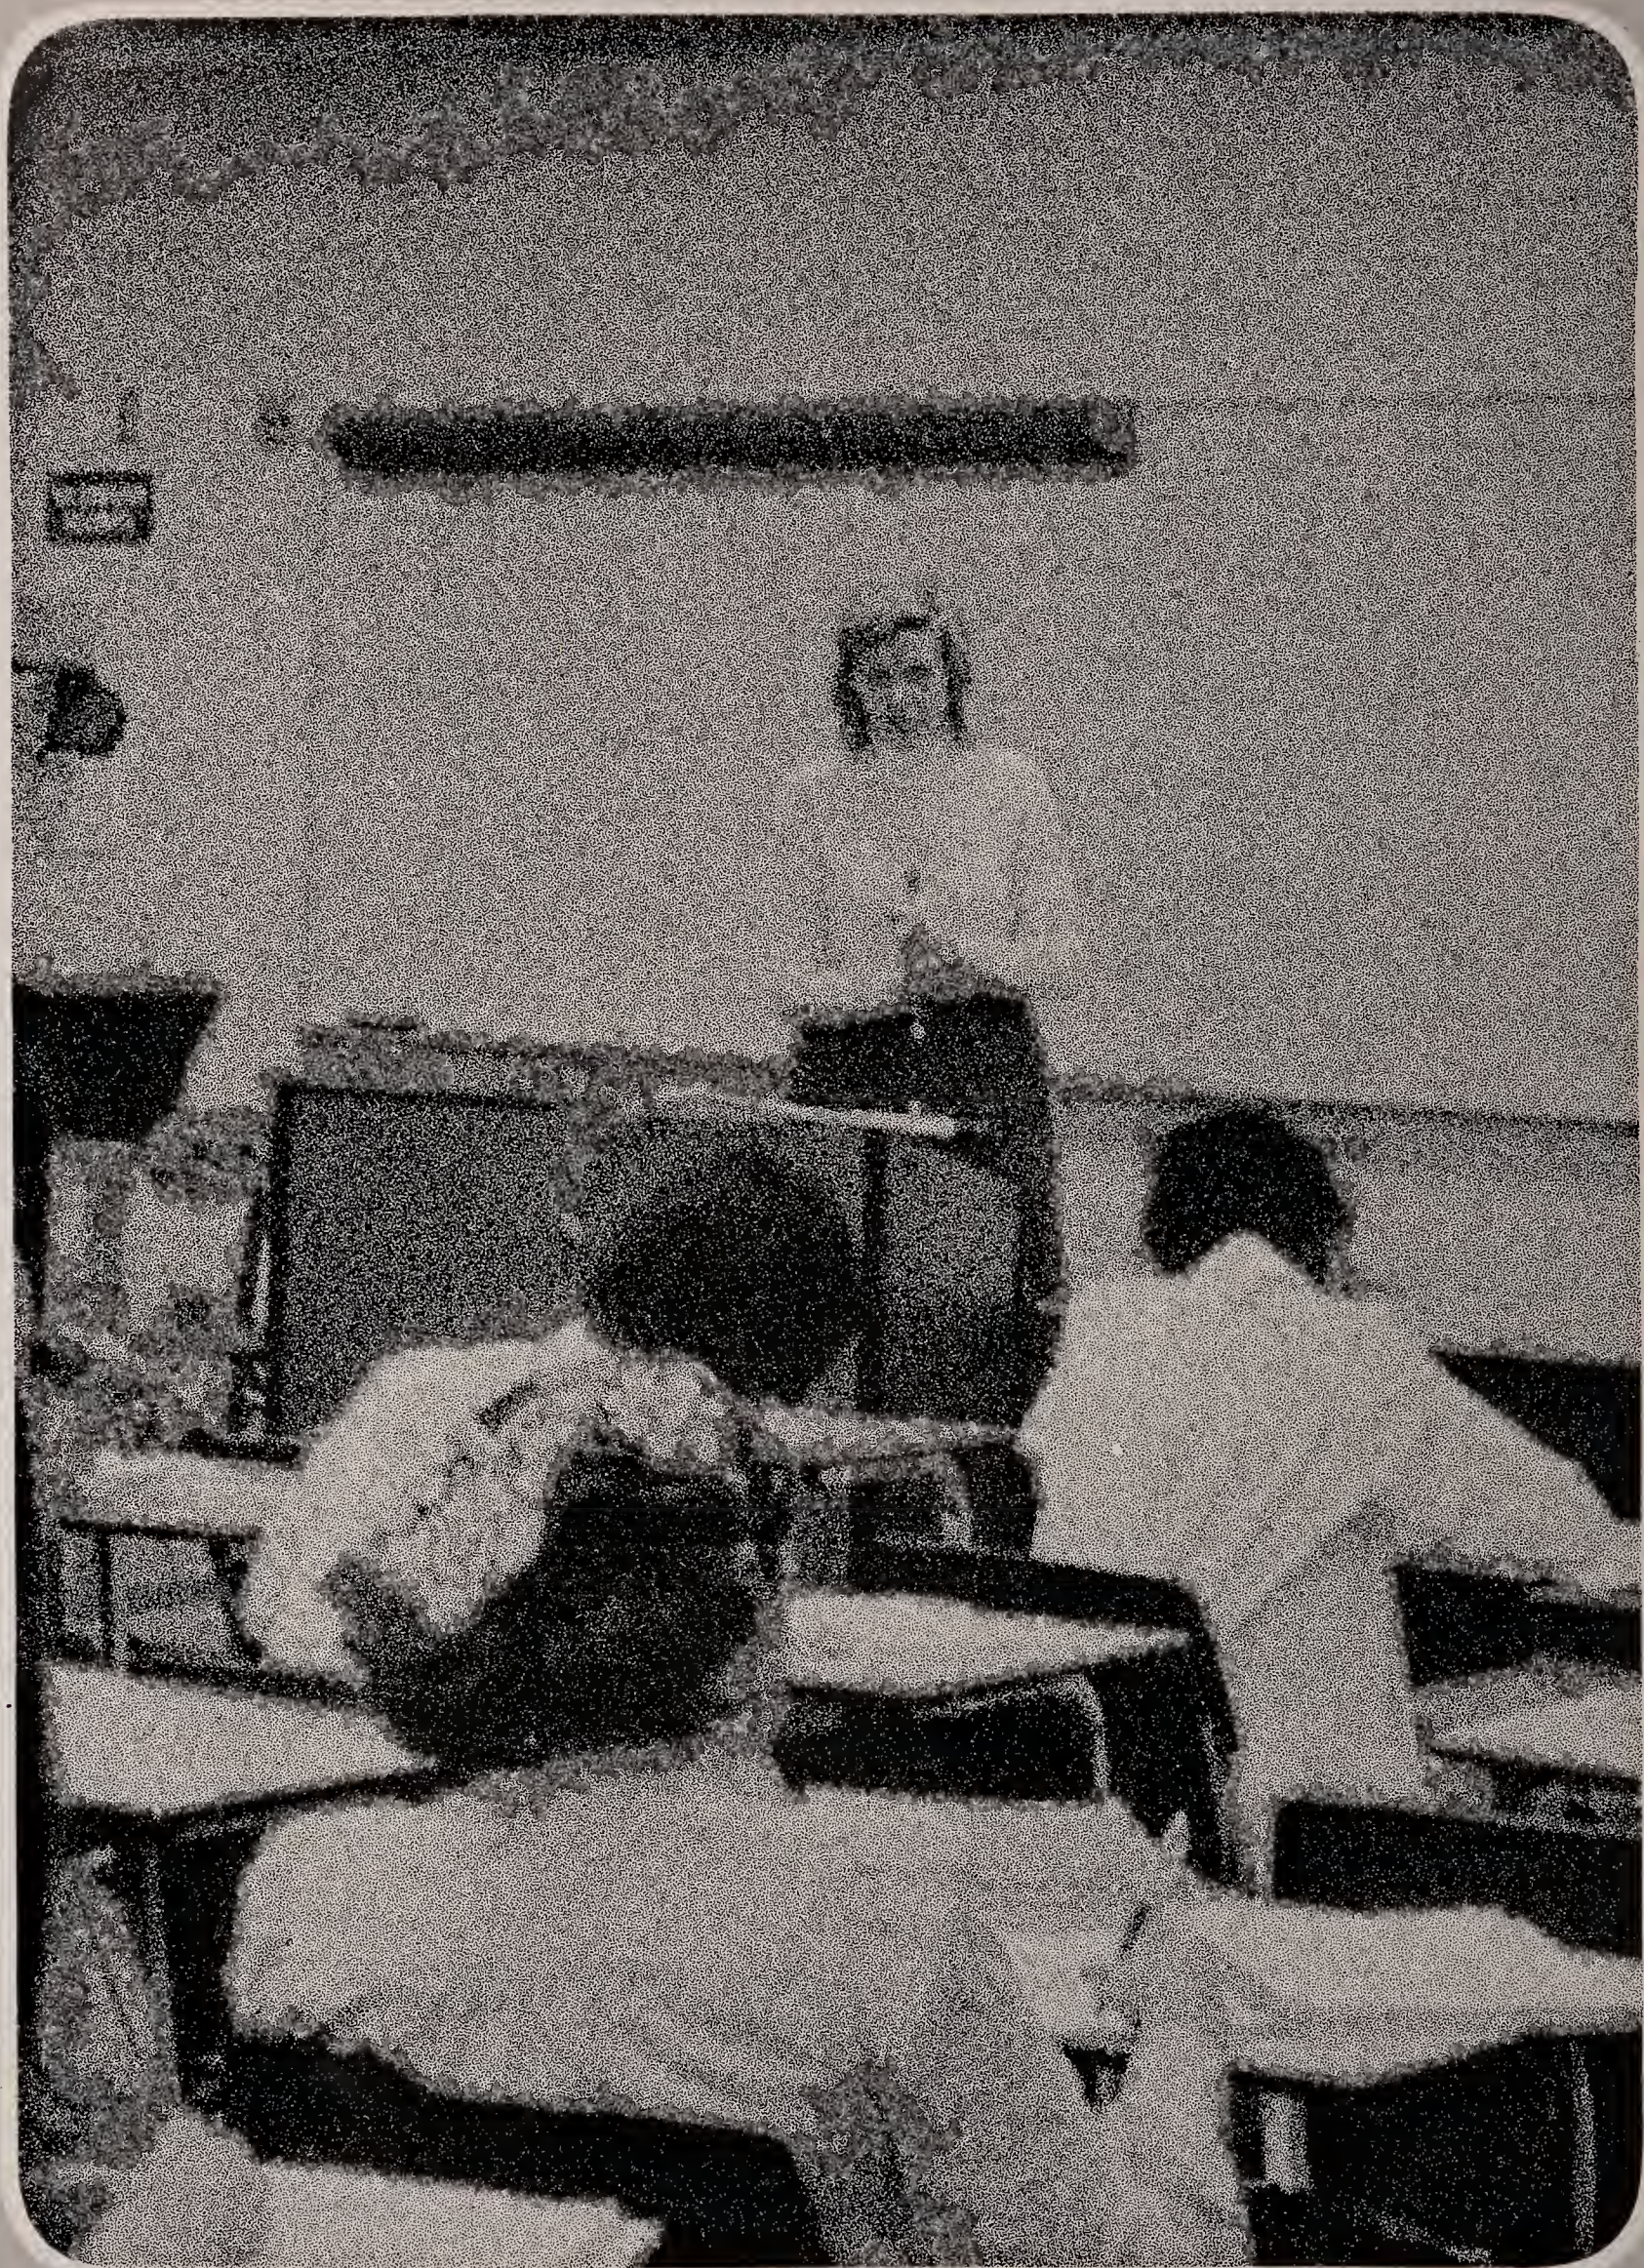

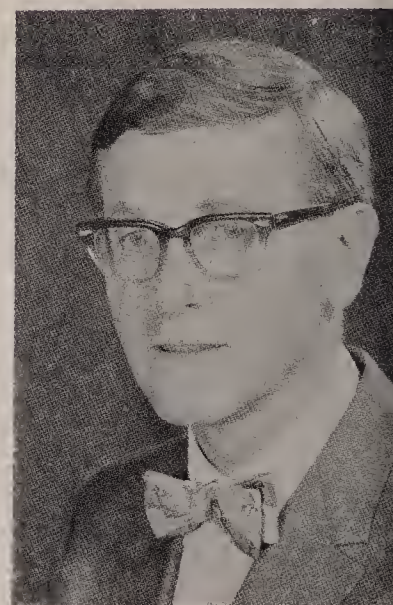

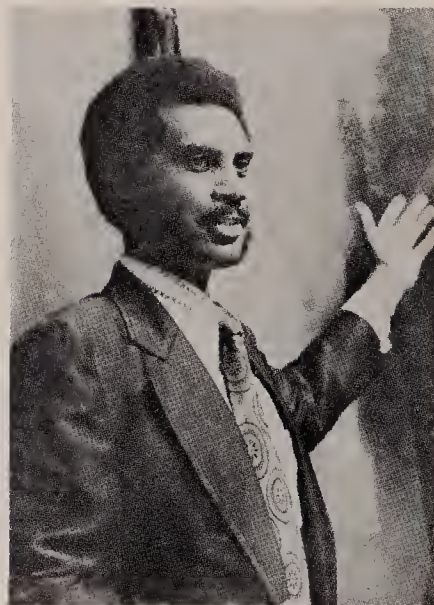

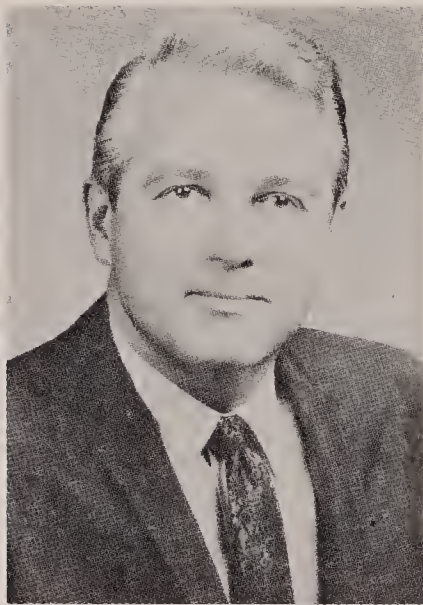

Would you recognize any of these people in white?

Introduction to Medical-Surgical Nursing

Freshmen become acquainted with charting, transcribing orders, handwashing, and therapeutic communication skills.

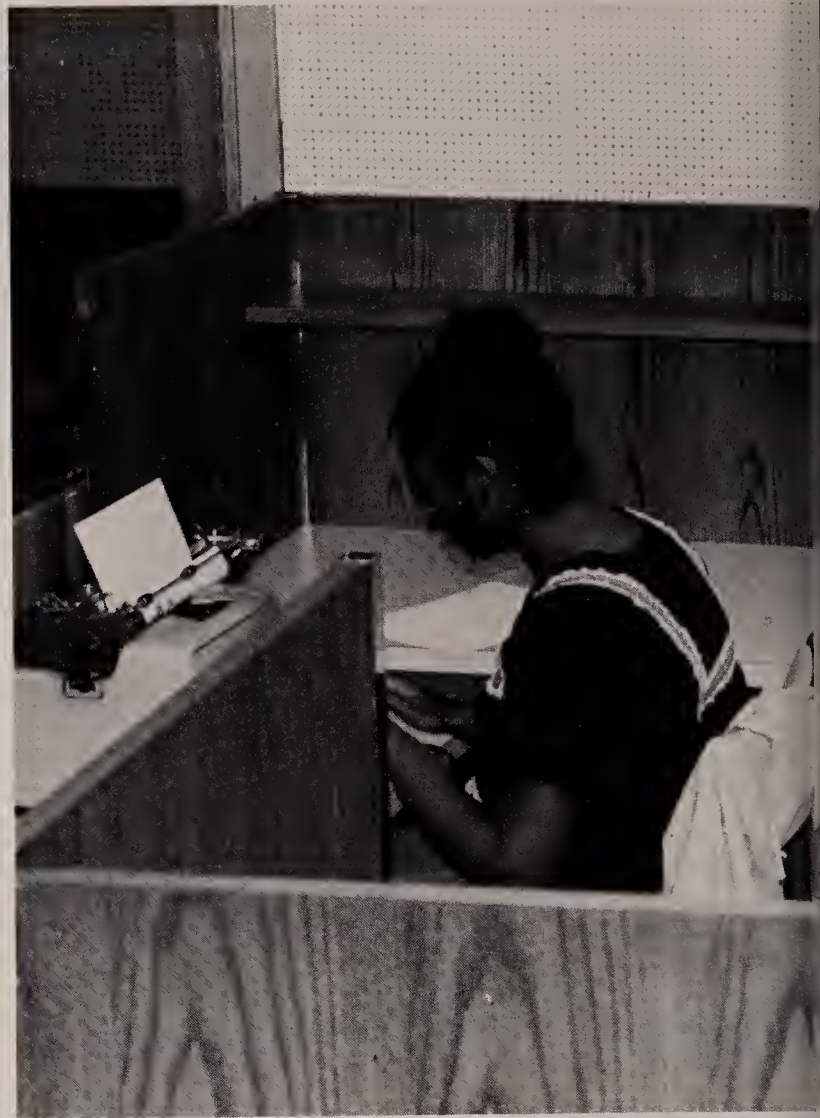

Freshmen students learn by practical experience and direct observation.

Providing necessary equipment for personal hygiene, charting pertinent observations and administering the proper medication are a few of the fundamentals learned.
